Should you put a TV unit in a living room?

An enclosed unit will hide the cables as well as any other equipment you would rather not keep on display. Most TV units are placed against walls or in the corner of the room for convenience and the placing of your own TV set might be taken out of your hands by the shape and layout of your living room.

Do you need a TV stand?

is the focal point of any room. But let's not forget about the stand. Keeping cables out of sight and offering plenty of storage for remotes, DVDs, and maybe a magazine or two, a well-chosen TV stand can transform your living space. It also doubles as a decorative piece.

Do TV units have open shelves?

Some of our TV units have open shelves, while others hide the storage behind cabinet doors. Depending on what you want to display, you can go for one or the other. If you've got your wires and cables built into the wall, then open shelves can be a cool option. That way, you can showcase your beautiful interior details.

Should a TV wall unit have legs?

A piece without legs can give a more solid, unified touch to your room, as the legs won't disturb the view. Both types of units offer storage solutions and can handle the weight if you have a larger TV. A TV wall unit creates a clean and minimalistic look. It's also easier to vacuum under, just a quick sweep and you're done.
