The U.S. and the Central African Republic (C.A.R.) have a small amount of bilateral trade. In 2004, the U.S. removed C.A.R. from the list of countries eligible for preferential trade benefits under the African Growth and Opportunity Act (AGOA). C.A.R. regained eligibility for benefits under AGOA in 2017.

Caritas Central African Republic operates in a country where insecurity is a constant factor and poverty widespread. Three decades of insecurity ended in 1993, but there was further unrest in 2002 and 2003, and more recently in 2012 with the seizure of power by Seleka's coalition, which plunged the country into a state of insecurity and fear ...

In this 2023 annual update, we hold a positive, albeit subdued, outlook for Central African Republic's telecommunications market's growth. The country's low GDP per capita, low levels of urbanisation, high unemployment levels and inequitable income distribution all weigh on the country's attractiveness as a telecoms investment destination. This means that operators ...
